

Title: Social model of disability - Autism

(0:01) imagine a company made up of only
(0:03) autistic people
(0:05) when the business was created they (0:07) designed it exactly as they wanted it
(0:10) their conversations were to the point
(0:12) lights were dimmed unnecessary noise
(0:15) reduced
(0:16) and the office was a calm environment
(0:20) one day some non-autistic people joined (0:22) the company
(0:24) when they started they noticed a
(0:26) distinct lack of small talk
(0:28) they felt they began to stand out from (0:30) everyone else each time they commented
(0:33) on the weather or the latest sports
(0:35) result
(0:36) the original staff noticed the (0:38) non-autistic people insisted on wearing
(0:41) uncomfortable clothing just because it
(0:43) looked nice
(0:44) and when socializing chose the busiest
(0:47) and loudest venue possible
(0:50) working groups and committees were (0:52) formed within the business to help

(0:54) integrate the non-autistic people
(0:56) several long-term employees became (0:58) worried about what was known as the
(1:00) problem of the non-autistics
(1:03) training courses have suggested to the
(1:05) non-autistics to have a conversation
(1:07) style that is more direct and to the (1:09) point
(1:10) special areas are created for (1:12) non-autistics to sit in where it is
(1:14) bright loud and busy
(1:17) but then one day the non-autistics
(1:20) realized that there wasn't actually
(1:22) anything wrong with them just that
(1:24) society and the business excluded them
(1:58) you